

FCC Commissioners
The Federal Communications Commission RE: Docket 04-435
445 12th Street, SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear FCC Commissioners ,

I am writing to voice my concerns about the FCC's proposal to relax the restrictions on the use of cell phones on airplanes in flight.

There is no hard evidence that cell phone use doesn't interfere with navigational instruments. The introduction of cell phone use in the cabin will not only increase tension among passengers, it will compromise flight attendants' ability to maintain order in an emergency.

The inconvenience of not being able to use a cell phone is something the flying public will get accustomed to and accept just like the smoking ban. They will plan accordingly and I'm sure will get as many words in as possible just prior to takeoff and immediately upon landing. The availability of phones on the seat backs that require a passenger pay for a call may help keep the calls limited to those important enough to consider having to pay for. If the inane conversations I'm hearing now in the few minutes passengers are allowed to talk are allowed during the flight , I will lose my mind. Thank you in advance for preserving a small island of cell-free serenity.

Please leave the current rules in effect.

Sincerely,

Jordan Nacov
